Note: The curtain will be opened between scenes in Act III to permit the audience to watch the scene change.

Produced by special arrangement with Curtis Brown, Ltd., London.

Royalties go to the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond St., London

To present "Peter Pan," written originally for reading, as a play of reasonable length for children, it has been necessary to delete some portions, principally those dealing with Tiger Lily and her Redskins, and to rearrange the acts.

This is the seventh annual production under this sponsorship.

Earlier ones were:

The Reluctant Dragon—May 14 and 17, 1947

The Wizard of Oz—Feb. 25 and 26, 1949

Alice in Wonderland—Feb. 24 and 25, 1950

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs—Feb. 23 and 24, 1951

Cinderella—Feb. 22 and 23, 1952

Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp—Feb. 27 and 28, 1953

ORIGIN

These productions are the outgrowth of the idea of Charlotte Merriman, formerly principal of Main Street School, who felt that Port Washington children should have the opportunity to see familiar children's stories brought to life on the stage, with adults playing adult parts, children playing child parts. Further, she felt that the production should be interesting to adults as well, and that prices should be so reasonable that any child—and any parent—could attend. The success of this idea is testified to by the record audiences each year, forcing a third performance of "The Wizard of Oz" and now two extra performances of this production. It is estimated that more than 2200 people saw last year's production, "Aladdin." Seating capacity of this auditorium is 850.
